Conditions.

THE Literary and Scientific Journal will be published Quarterly in Lexington, in numbers of 12 pages each.

The first number will be published in January, 1821 and the other numbers successively in April, July and October following.

The subscription will be only TWO DOLLARS per annum, to be paid in two instalments of $1.00 each, on receiving the first and third numbers, it is preferred to pay the whole in the first instance, which will be quite reasonable.

Several literary and scientific gentlemen have pledged their names to conduct, and contribute to this Journal. They will use every effort to render it a useful vehicle of general knowledge, and they earnestly solicit the co-operation and co-operation of all who frequent the Western States.

We will occasionally give an analysis of important works; but it is beyond the scope of our plan to review at large new publications.

Local politics and sectarian controversies shall be excluded from our pages; but Political Science and metaphysical disquisitions will be admitted.

We wish to render this Journal a Cyclopedic publication, in which every subject may find a place.

Foreign Intelligence.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, DEC. 30.

The fine fast sailing ship Hector, Captain Bennett, arrived at this port yesterday afternoon from Liverpool whence she sailed on the 19th ult. The editors of the Mercantile Advertiser have received by this arrival London papers to the 17th November inclusive, and Lloyd's Lists of the 10th, 14th and 17th of that month. These papers furnish many articles of considerable interest. We have copied the most prominent.

Don Manuel de Barros, attached to the Spanish legation to the U. States, arrived at the house of the Spanish consul in Bordeaux on the 20th October, with the treaty for the cession of the Florida, which had been ratified by the Cortes. A letter from Bordeaux, received at Paris on the 7th November, says he will embark immediately, in the ship Rapid, of New York, for Philadelphia.

The proceedings against the Queen have terminated in the house of Lords. It being ascertained on the 19th, that there would only be a majority of nine for the bill on the third reading, a motion was made by Lord Liverpool to postpone taking the question to that day six months, which was carried. This is considered in England as an abandonment of the prosecution, and great rejoicings had taken place in consequence throughout England. Lord Liverpool illuminated three successive nights in a very brilliant manner, the windows exhibiting transparencies and pictures inscribed "The Queen Triumphant." Some riots took place in the course of these demonstrations of joy, and the windows of two newspaper offices were demolished. Lord Liverpool, it is said, was about to resign.

CASE OF THE QUEEN.

The question on the second reading of the bill against the Queen was taken on the 6th Nov. when it appeared there were Contents 123—No Content, 22 majority 28. On the following day, the debate on the third reading was commenced, which was continued until the 10th. The house then divided; when there appeared for the third reading 102, against 92, showing a majority of only nine in favor of the bill.

As soon as the state of the division was announced, Lord Hare arose, and holding a paper in his hand, said he had been intrusted with a petition from her majesty, praying to be allowed by Commons against the passing of the bill. Lord Liverpool said, that he apprehended such a course would be rendered unnecessary by what he was about to state. He could not be ignorant of the state of public feeling with regard to this measure, and it appeared to be the opinion of the house that too bad a bill should be read a third time only by a majority of nine votes. Had the third reading been carried by as considerable a majority as the second, he, and his colleagues would have felt it their duty to persevere with the bill, and to send it down to the other branch of the legislature. In the present state of the country, however, and with the division of sentiment, so nearly balanced, just convinced by their lords, that they had come to the determination not to proceed further with it. He should accordingly move that the question that the bill doth pass be put on this day six months.—The most venomous efforts were made to place on this unexpected declaration. Earl Grey rose as soon as the Earl of Liverpool had resumed his seat, but the confusion did not subside until after his lordship had been for some time in his legs. His lordship complained of the whole course of ministers, and charged the servants of the crown with the grossest neglect of duty, in the first instance, in having only two hours evidence, and giving a willing credence to the most exaggerated and unfounded calumnies. They had thus, for many months, agitated the minds; they had produced a general stagnation of public and private business; and they had given on a most favorable opportunity, to the enemies of internal peace and tranquillity. They had been, as far as possible, instrumental in bringing about the present victory in the battle of Waterloo, and in giving a wide and lasting alarm to the minds of the people.

In the evening there was an illumination, as if a grand building as could have been erected in a sudden emergency, and to the indignation of the streets were crowded with multitudes of persons, congratulating each other on the rejection of the bill, as far as an important and unexpected victory achieved over an enemy who had approached to our very threshold. The news of the rejection of the bill having preceded her majesty, vast numbers assembled at Hare Park, and all along the road to Broadwaltham, where as her majesty passed over the air with shouts of "God bless your Majesty"—"God preserve you from your enemies." On her return to Buckingham-house, her majesty found several Italian ladies, noblemen, and gentlemen, who had the same afternoon arrived in this country to give evidence in her favor in the house of commons, if (as was expected) the bill should have been sent down to that house. They had the honor of dining with her majesty, and also Mr Alderman Wood, Courtier, Colonel Officer and his lady, and a number of others of her majesty's friends, and the evening was spent with the greatest delight and satisfaction.

LONDON, NOV. 16.

The Hon. Kepel Craven, one of the Queen's vice-chamberlains, has, by order of her majesty, written a letter to the Earl of Liverpool, demanding a suitable residence and establishment for her majesty. The letter states, that she had her majesty's commands to reside in this country in which she is now to reside; that this had been much too long delayed, with a view either in the station of her majesty or the honor of the Crown; nevertheless, that in the circumstances of the time, her majesty is willing to overlook such delay; but that it must be evident that no interval of time will be without injury in carrying this matter.

(said he) the proposal of the noble earl I see the fate of this odious measure consummated, and I feel nothing but the most entire and lively satisfaction. I heartily rejoice in this event. My lords, I am an old man; and my life, whether it have been for good or evil, has been passed under the sacred rule of the law. In this moment, I feel my strength renovated and repaired, by that rule being restored—the accused charge wherewithal we have been menaced has passed over our ears; there is an end of that horrid and portentous execration of a new law, retrospective and iniquitous, and oppressive; and the constitution and scheme of our polity is once more safe. My heart is too full of the escape we have just had, to let me do more than praise the blessings of the system we have received; but I cannot praise them adequately myself, and I never express my own sentiments in the fine language of one of the most eloquent authors of my age. Hooker, who thus speaks in his great work, his Ecclesiastical polity: "Of law there can be no law as acknowledged than that her seat is the bosom of God; her voice the harmony of the world; all things in heaven and earth do her honor; the greatest are not exempted from her power. Both angel and man, and creatures of what condition soever, though each in different sort of manner, yet all with uniform consent, admiring her as the mother of their peace and joy." The Duke of Albion said, he should oppose the motion for throwing out the bill. He was convinced of her majesty's criminality, and should never look upto her as queen. The motion was then put, and agreed to, and the house adjourned to the 23d in the day on which the Commons sat.

Her majesty was in attendance, in her private apartment, at the house of Lords, for a quarter before twelve. Whilst the peers were going through the process of voting, General Pepe, prior to the division, prior to the division, who were holding their theory, were voting down the votes. As soon as they ascertained that the majority did not exceed 9, they repaired to the presence of her majesty, and advised her to present a petition to be read by Speaker on the passing of the bill. Her majesty received the news of the victory for her bill with great joy, and signed the petition drawn up by her counsel with a smiling face, saying as the words were said: "God bless your majesty." There, Regina, still in silence, in a few moments, her countenance brightened with the glad tidings that the bill was rejected. Her majesty spoke no word, she looked fixed and immovable as a statue. Mr Pitt suggested the propriety of her majesty proceeding immediately to her residence, her attendants needed her on the 1st, her majesty still remained in silence for some time, and then said, "I have some time to let her know that the bill was rejected." Her majesty spoke no word, she looked fixed and immovable as a statue. Mr Pitt suggested the propriety of her majesty proceeding immediately to her residence, her attendants needed her on the 1st, her majesty still remained in silence for some time, and then said, "I have some time to let her know that the bill was rejected." Her majesty spoke no word, she looked fixed and immovable as a statue.

In the case of the King vs. Sir Francis' Baskets, in the Court of King's Bench, the further arguments were resumed this morning.

Parliament will meet again the 23d, but it will not sit, we believe, only for the purpose of doing more evil. It is likely to assemble again, for the dispatch of business, about the middle or latter end of January.—Cochrane.

London, Nov. 17.

The Queen intends going to Holy Cross-church on Sunday next to receive the sacraments, and in the Sun. England resolved, so that we were under the protection of the King, so that the King's troops were sent to enter the city.
